At the end of the last of these, the grade becomes easy to the top of the gap; but the prospect to the rider or the driver does not become much more assuring intil the gap is reached, for the eye fall with involuntary apprehension far down through trees and tumbling water-falls into depths that seem unfathomable.

This is not a fair type of the mountain gaps, for it is the highest and the most difficult; but all the others demanded the same engineering skill, and the same amount of hard work to make them practically available for travel and transpor

If this old maxim were oftener appli ed, it would save a vast amount of suffering and misery to the human family, but it seems that the only thing necessary in this age is to get the people to read some high sounding notice of a wonderful cure, others humbug them with some worthless patent medicine, which not only relieves them of their money, but leaves them with shattered health, and a broken down constitution. But there is least fear of injurous results, the "Seven Springs Iron-Alum Mass," is simple, pure and harmless, yet wonderfully efficient in curing diseases.
